

1993 Ward World Championship

The Winners!

Over 20,000 visitors from all over the world visited the 1993 Ward World Championship Wildfowl Carving Competition held in April in Ocean City, Maryland. It was the largest event ever of its kind. Five new World Champion pieces are now part of the permanent collection of The Ward Museum of Wildfowl Art.

In the decorative lifesize division, Larry Barth of Stahlstown, Pennsylvania, won the first place $20,000 purchase award with his carving of least bittern and marsh wren titled "In The Cattails." This is the fourth time Larry Barth has been named World Champion in this division. The second prize of $4,000 went to Jim Sprinkle of Chester, Maryland, for his "Three Flying Green Wing Teal Over Grass" and the third place $2,000 award was given to Pat Godin of Canada for his "Birch Lake - Ruffed Grouse."

There were over 1,000 carvers who entered over 2,000 pieces in the 1993 Ward World Championship, competing in Novice, Intermediate, Open and World levels. There was over $93,000 in prizes awarded to carvers from all over the world. Volunteers also came from all around the globe to help this event be such a success. The competition, for the first time, was also covered by CNN's World Weekend News.

Congratulations to all of the winners!

The 1993 Ward World Wildfowl Carving Competition debuted a new World Champion category called Shootin' Rig. The entries were required to consist of a hen and drake of any species and at least one other bird of the same or different species. Entries in the Shootin' Rig were viewed strictly as working birds and were judged in real life conditions in Assawoman Bay behind the Ocean City Convention Center. Spectators lined the docks to watch judges as they studied the entries. The winner was Tom Christie of Marion, Ohio.
